2. Citations and explanations

1. WO-A-01/96008 (D1) discloses (see figure 1) a reactor for producing propene by the oxydehydrogenation of propane. A portion of the reaction gas is fed back to the reaction zone as recycle gas in the corresponding method.

D1 is therefore regarded as prejudicial to the novelty of the subject matter of claim 1 (PCT Article 33(2)).

2. The subject matter of claims 2 to 13 is neither novel (PCT Article 33(2)) nor inventive (PCT Article 33(3)) in relation to D1 because the features of these claims are either known from D1 (for example, the selection of propane as a starting compound (the present claim 4)) or are regarded as commonplace for a method of this type.
